By the conclusion of "The Lost Medallion," the heroes had found Tae Thoon's map and found the ancient city of Aurora. Still, lots of questions remained unanswered. Who was the mysterious woman? What brought Kaleb to this world? How did Kaleb and Tae Thoon know each other and why did Tae Thoon have this link to him? "He sent you a box of chocolates," the woman said. "Kaleb told me to give you this as a gift. Thought you might have a sweet tooth." "Thanks," the man glanced at the woman and then at Zane, before turning back to the map. "Anything going on out there, Red?" he asked. The warrior considered the question. "The dwarves were moving their supplies earlier today. I noticed an oil barrel." Zane smiled, his incorporeal form glowing brighter. "Back to business I see. Time to find out just what's outside."

... Every last living thing on earth is at war. Players take turns commanding and reinforcing units on a map. In the 1939 - 1945 eras it was firefights, tanks, and the larger more modern forces on both sides. The 1940s were full of strategic air raids, dive-bombing, air-sea battles, and naval invasions. War continued to rage on. Not just on the land - but the air - the sea, and space. During World War II, on the other side of the world, Japan was also fighting a fierce war of attrition, and in 1941, they began to run out of resources. So they began to take advantage of what was left in their arsenal, and even new weapons. A series of ambitious military reforms led to the emergence of a new kind of fighting force. A well-led, well-equipped, and highly specialized fighting force, capable of completely turning the tide of the war in Japan’s favor. ... The player controls the main force commander. Players must build and command units to attack and defend the front line. But be careful, because as the battle goes on the player’s units will begin to degenerate, possibly with disastrous consequences.
