The European Union said on Thursday it was ready to discuss a possible free trade agreement with the United States. But a senior EU executive warned Washington that talks on a trans-Atlantic deal could take decades and the EU's current offer to the United States could be more of a headache than a trade boost. The EU executive, the European Commission, said that the Obama administration was due to release more details of its package of proposed concessions to the 27-nation bloc after weeks of tortuous negotiations with EU officials. "We are ready to discuss any options," EU economics commissioner Olli Rehn told reporters on a conference call. "We need clarity on all aspects of that, but that
