FAT32 format (4324). The drivers have been tested and work correctly for NFS Server 5.1 in Windows Server. . The second file must be a 6525 segment file (binary format). Do a google search and you'll find them.. .Q: memory address of a large char* Ok, this is driving me crazy: char *str1 = "xyz"; char *str2 = new char[strlen(str1)+1]; strcpy(str2,str1); //... delete str2; ... char *str3 = (char *)&str2; //... char *str4 = (char *)&str2+1; //... why does the first string pointer have the same memory address as the second one? A: You need to new it as std::string, then strcpy is fine: #include std::string str1("xyz"); std::string str2(new char[strlen(str1)+1], '\0'); strcpy(str2.c_str(), str1.c_str()); //... delete[] str2.c_str(); If you have to use the raw array, use reinterpret_cast to get the address of the first element. Q: list won't append to struct I'm creating an array list and trying to append to the list, but the only thing I seem to be able to append to is the struct. Code: struct myStruct { var id: String var firstName: String var lastName: String } struct myStructs{ var list: Array? } var myStructs = myStructs() // Append to array, but this just makes the struct array empty let my1 = myStructs() my1.list = [myStruct(id: "abc", firstName: "abc", lastName: "def"), myStruct(id: "xyz", firstName: "xyz", lastName: "xyz")] my1.list!.append(myStruct(id: "abc", firstName: "
