Epstein-Barr virus (EBV) is known to be involved in the pathogenesis of both Hodgkin's disease (HD) and Burkitt's lymphoma. We studied the relationship between EBV and these two lymphoproliferative disorders by studying the presence and the titer of EBV antibodies in the sera of patients with HD (n = 76) and of patients with Burkitt's lymphoma (n = 21). An assay based on the enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay with the use of VSV-EBV antigens was used to detect EBV antibodies. Antibodies were found in 95% of HD cases. The ratio of EBV-seropositivity was slightly higher in
